But we beg leave to ask, What are luws, i. e. laws of Nature? Mr. Dommond says correctly, "Law is an ascertained working sommence or constant order among the l'honomena of Nature," Herbert Spencer says that Law is a "uniformity of relations uniong phenomena." The discovery of natural laws, as Spencor further shows, depends upon variot , causes, which I will enumerate as given by Mr. Spencer: "first the directness with which personal welfare is affected; second, the conspicuousness of one or hoth phenomena between which a relation is to be perceived; third, the absolute frequency with which the relations occur; fourth, the relative frequency of becarence; fifth. simplicity of relations; sixth, the degree of abstractness."
